Real Station screens, set up for Mirror Upgrade with example customers. Your own customers and quotes replace them on day one. Tap any screen to see it full size.

From your gallery. Twenty years of making this happen deserves a store and a system that keep up with it.

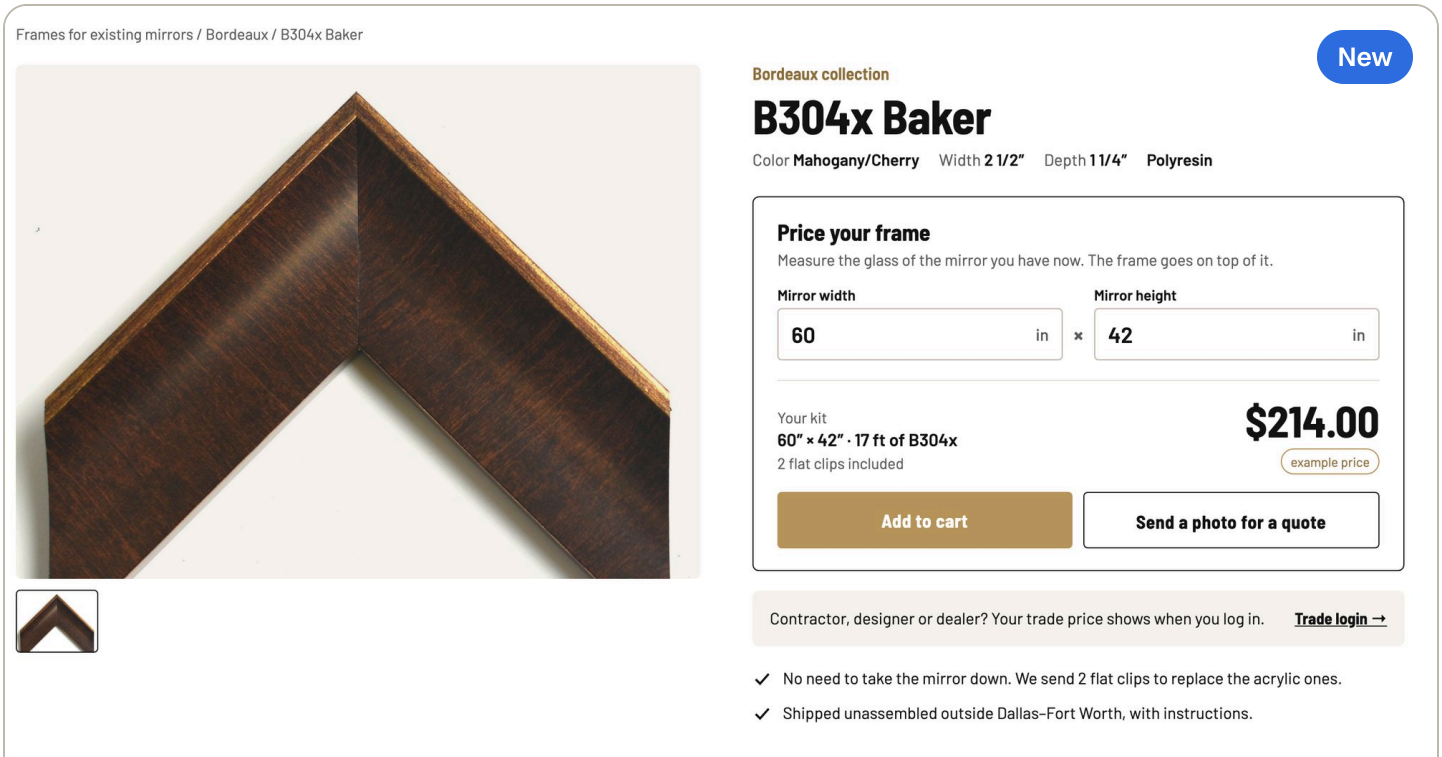

One quote, start to finish

A homeowner in Frisco wants to frame the builder-grade mirror in her bathroom. Here is what happens, screen by screen.

1 She prices the frame herself, at nine at night

Today the B304x page shows her two empty boxes and an Add to Quote button, and Google reads the frame as $0.00. On the new page she types her mirror's size and sees a price and what comes in the kit. A contractor or dealer logs in and sees their trade price instead. An unusual job? She sends a photo from the same page.

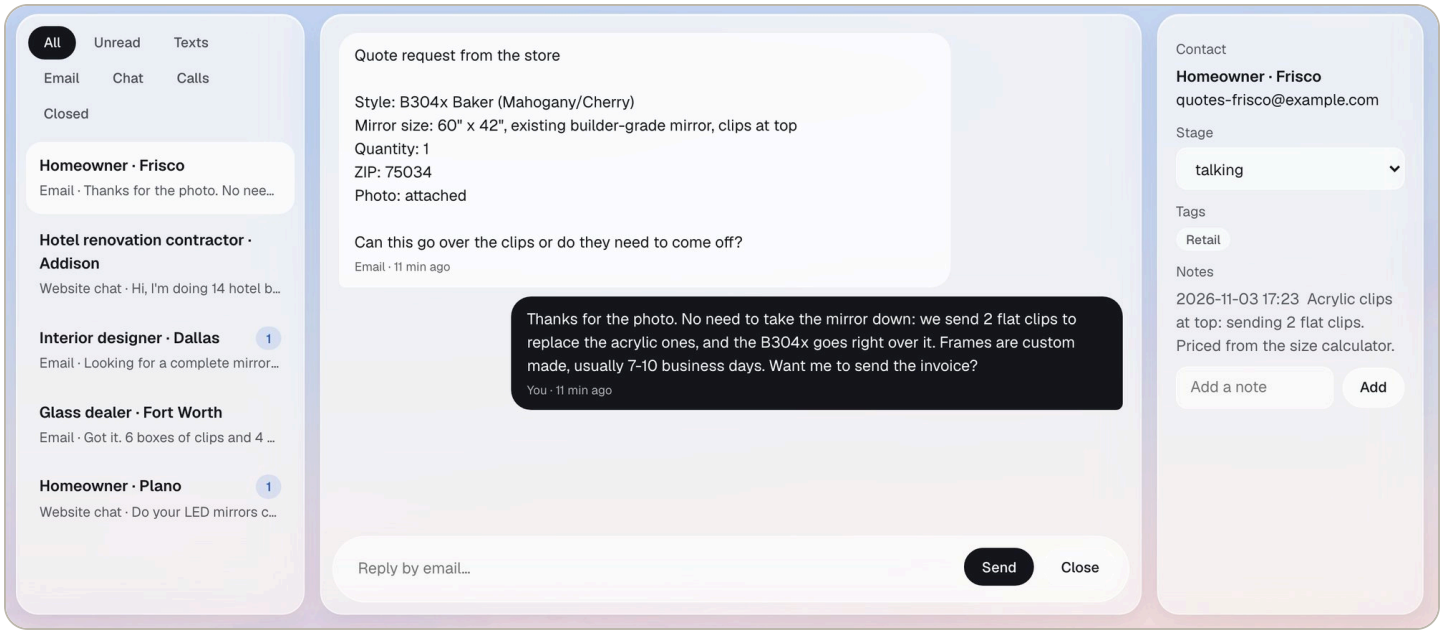

A concept. The price shown is an example; yours come from your price sheet.

It lands in one inbox, with everything you need to answer

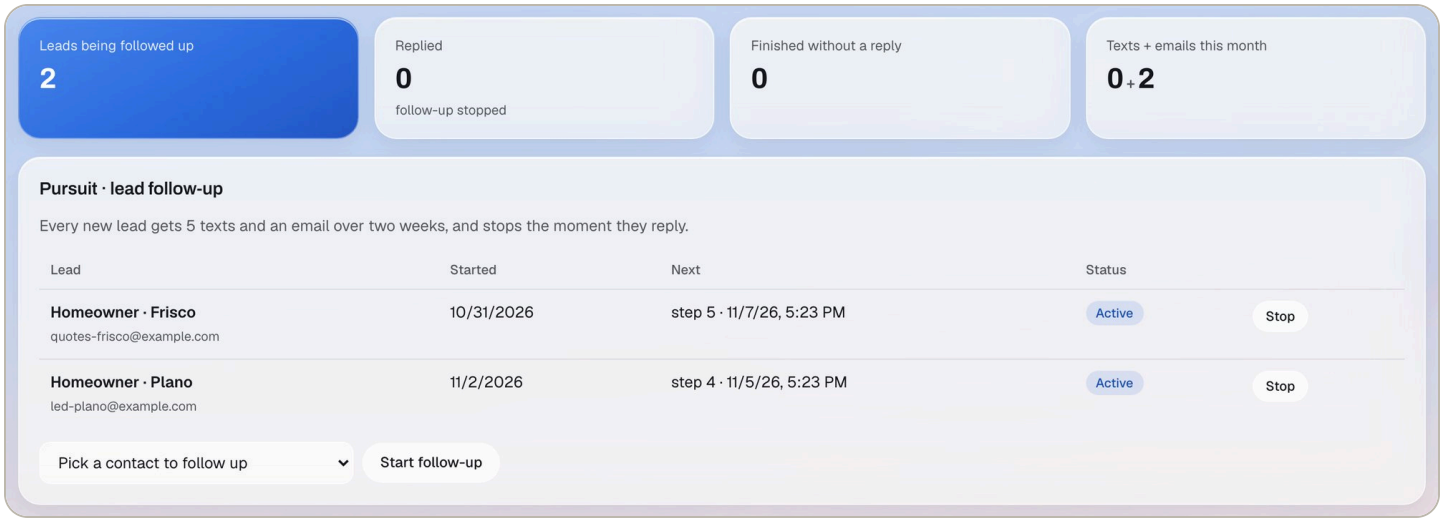

Style, size, ZIP and her photo arrive together. Quotes from the store, website chat and email all come into this one list, on your computer and on your phone. Beside each one: where they are in the sale, whether they're retail, trade or wholesale, and your team's notes.

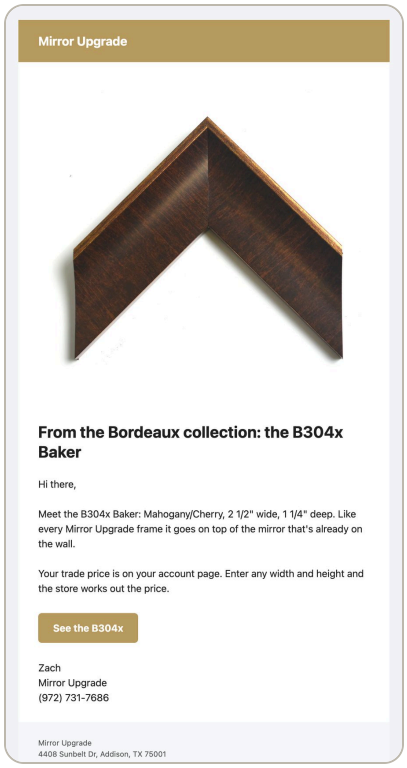

3

She goes quiet. The follow-up doesn't, and nobody gets lost.

By the next day there's no answer. A reminder goes out in your words, then a few more over two weeks, and stops the moment she replies or says no. Email by default; texts only to customers who have agreed to them. Every customer is tagged and staged, so you can see at a glance who's talking, who's booked and who's won.

One email reaches every dealer

A new style, a new color, a price change: write it once in your own colors, pick "wholesale" and "trade", and send. Opens and clicks come back into the same app, so you can see which dealers looked.

And after every delivery, a short email asks for a Google review. You have one today; Barco Mirror & Glass, a mile up Addison Road, has 25.

A fake invoice in your name gets turned away

Two records on your domain mean anyone can send email that claims to be from order@mirrorupgrade.com. We fix them, and from then on Gmail and Outlook refuse what you didn't send.

Today, an example fake

A customer's inbox — Can get through

Mirror Upgrade <order@mirrorupgrade.com>

Invoice 4471: please use our new bank details

Hi, our bank changed this month. Please send payment for your order to the account below...

Nothing on your domain tells Gmail or Outlook to stop it.

After we fix two records

The same fake — Turned away

Mirror Upgrade <order@mirrorupgrade.com>

Invoice 4471: please use our new bank details

Hi, our bank changed this month. Please send payment for your order to the account below...

Your domain now says: refuse anything we didn't send. Gmail and Outlook turn it away.

What changes for you

	Today	With Station
Quotes from the store, chat and email	Spread across info@, order@ and a quote app	One inbox, on the web and on your phone
A quote that goes quiet	Waits until someone remembers	Followed up in your words until they answer
Prices online	None. Google reads every product as $0.00	A price from the buyer's own size; trade prices behind a login
Google Shopping	None of your 90 products can be listed	A product feed with real prices
The quote page	Shows the code `{rfq_content}`	A form that takes the size, style and a photo
Google reviews	One, from four years ago	A request after every delivery
Your dealers	One email at a time	One email to all of them
Fake email in your name	Nothing tells Gmail or Outlook to stop it	Turned away

Is it worth $714 a month? That depends on how many quotes come in and what an order is worth to you. Bring rough numbers to the meeting and we'll work out together how many saved quotes pay for it.

Bills that may go away. The new quote form replaces the Request for Quote app on your store, so if it's on a paid plan that charge stops. Your email records still point at HostGator's old web hosting; if you're still paying for it, we move what's left and you can cancel.

What we build

01 Email and domain security

One correct SPF record in place of the two, DMARC (two weeks of reports first so no real mail is blocked, then a policy that rejects fakes), the domain locked and its 19 November renewal checked with you on our first call. Then a full outside security check of your email, website, encryption and DNS, the fixes, and a fresh check every month.

02 The store, rebuilt on your Shopify

New design on the account you already have, so orders, customers and checkout carry over. The size calculator on every frame from your price sheet, with your rules for minimums and cut fees. You decide what the public sees: a full price, a "from" price or none. Trade prices behind a login you approve (on your plan that takes a wholesale app; you see its fee before you agree). A quote form that works, every collection linked, fast on a phone, every page written up for Google with a real price, and a product feed to Google Merchant Center. You approve every page on a preview link first.

03 The customer system

Everything on the screens above: one inbox, quote follow-up, chat on the store, review requests and trade email. We import your customer list and open quotes, write the follow-ups in your words, and give everyone who answers quotes their own login. Your phone numbers stay exactly as they are.

When it happens

Before 19 Nov	Domain renewal checked and locked. One SPF record. DMARC switched on in report mode.
Week 1	Customer system set up. Your list imported, email routed, your team logged in. Free until the store launches.
Weeks 2 and 3	The new store on a preview link. You check every page and every price.
Week 4	The store switches over. Product feed to Google, listing corrected, security check finished.
Every month	A security re-scan, and the Station report: quotes in, quotes won, reviews.

What we need from you

Prices	Your price sheet, and the rules for trade and wholesale pricing.
One call	Twenty minutes with GoDaddy, HostGator and Microsoft 365 open. You sign in; we make the changes while you watch.
Shopify	A staff account for Station on your store.
Customers	Your customer list in any format, and any open quotes.
Photos	Finished installs you're proud of, full size.
People	Who answers quotes, so each of them gets a login.

The first 12 months after launch come to $13,068, paid to Station.

Paid to others. Your Shopify plan and apps (as now, plus the wholesale app for the trade login), the domain renewal at GoDaddy, Microsoft 365 and card fees.

Starting smaller. The store and the security work stand on their own: $4,500 to build and $97 a month, without the customer system. Add it later if you want it.

What security can promise. It lowers the risk and shortens the time to respond. Nobody can promise you won't be hacked, and we won't.

Yours to keep. The domain, the store, the customer list and every message stay yours. If you leave, we email you a full export of your data.

Changing your mind. Cancel the monthly items any time. The build is billed half to start and half at launch, after you've approved the preview.

Say yes, and the email fix starts this week

Line 01 starts the day you say yes. The store preview follows in week 2. Want something changed first? Tell us in the meeting, or reply to the email this came with, and we'll send a new version.

Station builds websites, customer systems and security for businesses of every size. Sites we've built are at station.solutions/portfolio.
